The building sets with the gable end facing Maryland Route 135. The roof line runs north/south. The exterior walls are covered with asbestus shingles. The roof of the porte-cochere is supported on the south end by two, free standing plain columns, one at each end of the roof. Between the posts is a frellis frieze. The facade has a center door and a set of double windows to either side. The entrance is reached by a set of concrete steps. There is a small portion out the east side as well as a porch.
